Carol Merrill Spoken Word

Carol Merrill will read from her new book, Hi Nanao. Carol writes: "Nanao was a wandering poet who taught me to chant the Buddhist Heart Sutra very slowly. He suffered horribly in WWII and recounted walking through ruins of Hiroshima a few days after the blast. After this he shouldered a backpack and began walking Japan and then the world for many decades, living with as little money as possible. We walked together in New Mexico, Hopi, China, and Mongolia. Some quotes of Nanao's thoughts that were recorded in my journals are printed here. Perhaps the reader will find something encouraging in his words. Our son Issa Abraham Sakaki Merrill died too young. All proceeds from this volume will go to the scholarship for peace building students in his name. It is funded through the University of New Mexico Foundation. In a recent dream about Nanao I heard his voice, "What use celebrating Nanao if human race doesn't survive... Get busy!"
