Ken Hada Spoken Word

Ken Hada lives and writes in rural Pottawatomie County, Oklahoma. He finds inspiration from the natural world, both at home and in his travels. Author of eleven collections of poetry, his latest book is Come Before Winter (Turning Plow Press, 2023). His previous collection, Contour Feathers (Turning Plow Press, 2021) received the Oklahoma Book Award. His other works have been awarded by The Western Writers of America, The National Western Heritage Museum, South Central Modern Language Association and The Oklahoma Center for the Book. Four of his poems have been featured on “The Writer’s Almanac.” In addition to his poetry, Ken remains active in scholarship, writing and publishing regularly on regional writing, literary ecology and multicultural literatures. He is a professor at East Central University where he directs the annual Scissortail Creative Writing Festival, now in its nineteenth year.
